What I Need to Know

Hello Grade 10 learners! In this first module for the 1st grading period, you will learn how to:

Use information from news reports, speeches, informative talks, panel discussions, etc. in everyday conversations and exchanges

You can say that you have understood the lesson in this module if you can already:

1. list down materials which are sources of useful information;
2. identify steps/techniques in listening/reading for information;
3. determine general and specific information in a text listened to/read;
4. get information useful to daily living from texts listened to/read;
5. apply the information gained from reading and listening to daily life;
6. share useful information learned to others (family members, friends, classmates).

What I Know

Answer the following questions. Select your answers from the options provided. Write the letter of your choice on your answer sheet.

1. Which of the following materials is NOT a common source of information?
   A. news report
   B. songs
   C. TED-Ed presentations
   D. speeches of public officials

2. Which is an example of a general statement?
   A. According to the news, classes in the Philippines will begin on August 24, 2020.
   B. I have heard on the radio that the city of Manila will give free tablets and pocket Wi-Fi to their students and teachers.
   C. The news is about the opening of classes in the Philippines.
   D. President Duterte said on his speech last night that traditional classes will not start unless there is a cure or vaccine for the COVID-19.

   Listen to a news report on the radio, TV, or at YouTube. Then, answer the questions below.

3. What is the news all about?
4. What specific information did you hear from the news? Give one.
5. What specific action will you do after learning the information from the news report?
   _____

Lesson 1	Use of Information from Texts Read/Listened to

What's In

Before we start with the lesson, let us first review different sources of information. What listening/reading materials are common sources of information? Write these on the chart below.

What's New

A. Before Reading Activity

Are you one of those people who share information they have heard from others? Do you share interesting or informative information to your family or friends? Why?

B. During Reading Activity

Let us read a conversation between friends who are sharing information to each other.

Natalie: Hey Leon!
Leon: What's up Nat?
Natalie: Last night, I heard a news from CNB about exercising. I know you are a fitness fanatic (haha) so you might want to know.
Leon: I am excited! Tell me about it.

Natalie: Well, according to the news, since we are already in general community quarantine, people can now go out and do simple exercises like brisk walking, running, jogging, and even biking. Of course, you still have to wear face masks and maintain a physical distance from others.

Leon: That's neat. How about sports Nat? I miss playing basketball with our friends.

Natalie: Sadly, the news says team sports like basketball are still not allowed. Also, according to the news, gyms will remain close to avoid possible spread of the disease.

Leon: Well that is alright. Safety is our priority as they say. What is important is we can now do simple exercises to make us healthy. Anyway, Nat, do you want to walk with me tomorrow in the Riverpark?

Natalie: Sure, but you have to be 10 feet away from me!

C. After Reading Activity

Let us analyze the conversation between Natalie and Leon by answering the following questions:

1. What is the topic of Natalie's news to Leon?

2. What pieces of information about exercising were heard and shared by Natalie? Write two.

3. Why do you think sports like basketball and gyms are not yet allowed under the general community quarantine (GCQ)?

   _____

4. Why did Natalie share this news to Leon?

What is It

We listen and read different kinds of materials for many reasons or purposes. One of these is to get information. It is perhaps the most common reason why we listen and read. Why do you think we listen for information? What can we get from listening for information? _____

What other examples of listening/reading for information activities can you think of? _____

Some of the common materials that can be sources of information are:

a) news reports
   - world news, local news, police report, weather report, science and environment news, health news, entertainment news, business news, technology news, and many others

b) textbooks
   - information about the different subjects in schools

c) articles from different reliable websites
   - articles about different subjects in schools
   - articles about different human-interest topics (ex. food, fashion, music)

d) speeches
   - by the President, by the city mayor and other public officials or personalities

e) informative talks
   - TED talks, vlogs, podcasts (These three are available in YouTube.)

f) panel discussions
   - a panel or group of Filipino artists talking about Philippine art

g) interviews
   - interviews with experts, famous people, politicians, celebrities

Aside from these, what other materials can be a good source of information? What can be a good criterion in selecting materials as sources of information?

We often share the information we heard or read to others. We do this because we know that the information will be useful for them, or they will be interested to know about the topic. In sharing information, try to begin with a general statement to introduce your topic; this statement answers the question "What is the material all about?". This is also called the gist. Then, provide the specific information or details. These specific information answer yes/no questions and the 5Ws/1H questions (who, what, where, when, why, and how). We should also explain how these pieces of information can be useful in our daily living.

What values are important to remember when sharing information to others?

What's More

Answer the following activities to practice your knowledge and skill about the topic of listening/reading for information.

Activity 1

Agree or disagree with the following ideas taken from the 'What is It' section of this module. Write a short (1-2 sentences only) explanation for your answer.

1. Getting information is the most common purpose why we listen or read.
   Agree or disagree? Why?
2. Reading/listening for information keep us updated, give us new or additional knowledge, or help us answer questions.
   Agree or disagree? Why?
3. In sharing specific information to other people, be truthful all the time.
   Agree or disagree? Why?

Activity 2

Practice reading/listening to get information by doing ONE of the following activities.

Activity 2.1: Listening Activity

1. Listen to the TED-Ed presentation "How to speak so that people want to listen" by Julian Treasure https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=eIho2S0ZahI&t=443s.

2. After listening, answer the following questions:
   a. What is the presentation all about?

   b. What specific details or information did you hear from Julian Treasure's presentation? Write two below.
      _____

   c. How will you use the information you have learned from the text you have listened to? What will you do the next time you will speak to other people?

3. Share the information you have heard from the presentation to a family member or a friend. Record the sharing of information. Then, send it to your teacher's email address.

Activity 2.2: Reading Activity

1. Read the paragraph from a TED talk.

Excerpt from "How to speak so that people want to listen"

by Julian Treasure

The human voice: It's the instrument we all play. It's the most powerful sound in the world, probably. It's the only one that can start a war or say, "I love you." And yet many people have the experience that when they speak, people don't listen to them. And why is that? How can we speak powerfully to make change in the world?

What I'd like to suggest, there are a number of habits that we need to move away from. I've assembled for your pleasure here seven deadly sins of speaking. I'm not pretending this is an exhaustive list, but these seven, I think, are pretty large habits that we can all fall into.

First, gossip. Speaking ill of somebody who's not present. Not a nice habit, and we know perfectly well the person gossiping, five minutes later, will be gossiping about us. Second, judging. We know people who are like this in conversation, and it's very hard to listen to somebody if you know that you're being judged and found wanting at the same time. Third, negativity. You can fall into this. My mother, in the last years of her life, became very negative, and it's hard to listen. I remember one day, I said to her, "It's October 1 today," and she said, "I know, isn't it dreadful?" And another form of negativity, complaining. We complain about the weather, sports, about politics, about everything, but, complaining is a viral misery. It's not spreading sunshine and lightness in the world.

Excuses. We've all met this guy. Maybe we've all been this guy. Some people have a 'blamethrower'. They just pass it on to everybody else and don't take responsibility for their actions, and again, hard to listen to somebody who is being like that. Penultimate, the sixth of the seven, embroidery, exaggeration. It demeans our language. And then, of course, this exaggeration becomes lying, and we don't want to listen to people we know who are lying to us.

And finally, dogmatism. The confusion of facts with opinions. When those two things get conflated, you're listening into the wind. You know, somebody is bombarding you with their opinions as if they were true. It's difficult to listen to that.

2. After reading, answer the following questions:
   a. What is the text all about?

   b. What specific details or information did you get from Julian Treasure's essay? Write two below. Do not copy directly, word for word, from the essay but use your own words in expressing the ideas.

   c. How will you use the information you have learned from the text you have read? What will you do the next time you will speak to other people?

3. Share the information you have learned to a family member or a friend. Record the sharing of information. Then, send it to your teacher's email address.

Activity 3

Here are additional activities to practice getting information from listening/reading texts. Just choose ONE activity to work on.

Activity 3.1. Listening to a Panel Discussion

A panel is a group of people talking about a topic. In a panel discussion, a panel member can freely add to the ideas given by another member of the panel. You can see this in the panel discussion that you will be watching.

Panel Discussion:
The Bottomline: The difference between "Lungkot" and Depression
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=axZrl0sdNNs

1. Before you listen, answer the following question:
   a. What do you think will be the contents of the panel discussion based from its title?

2. Listen to the panel discussion. As you listen, write:
   - the gist of the panel discussion (What is it all about? or What is the topic?)

   - specific information/details (Write two.)

3. Think of ways to make the information you have learned useful to you and to other people. What actions can you do from the information present in the panel discussion?

Activity 3.2 Reading for Mental Health

The UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund) is the branch of the United Nations which takes care of the welfare of children and teenagers worldwide. What you are going to read is a part of the UNICEF's advocacy of keeping the mental health of teenagers healthy during the COVID-19 pandemic.

If school closures and worrying headlines are making you anxious, you are not the only one. Actually, that is how you should be feeling.

"Psychologists have long recognized that anxiety is a normal and healthy function that alerts us to threats and helps us take measures to protect ourselves", says Dr. Lisa Damour, expert adolescent psychologist, best-selling author and monthly New York Times columnist.

"Your anxiety is going to help you make the decisions that you need to be making right now – not spending time in big groups of people, washing your hands and not touching your face. Such feelings are helping not only you, but others as well. That is how we take care of members of our community. We think about the people around us as well."

Although anxiety about coronavirus is completely normal, make sure "to get information from reliable sources [such as UNICEF and World Health Organization], or to check any information coming through less reliable channels", Dr. Damour advises.

If you are worried that you may have the symptoms, it is important that you tell your parents/guardians about it. "You should know that the coronavirus disease is usually mild, especially for children and young people", says Dr. Damour.

It is also important to know that many symptoms of COVID-19 can be treated. Dr. Damour advises to tell your parents or a trusted adult if you are feeling unwell or if you are worried about the virus, so that they can help you.

And remember: "There are many things we can do to keep ourselves and others safe and to feel in better control of our circumstances: frequently wash our hands, don't touch our faces and limit face time with others."

1. As you read the text, answer the following questions:
    - What is the gist of the reading material?

    - What specific details/information can you get from the text? Write two.

2. How can you use the information you have learned from the text in helping yourself or other people? What actions/activities can you do based from the information you have learned from the text?

What I Have Learned

In this module, you have studied about listening and reading to get useful information. Express what you have learned by answering the questions below.

1. Why do you read/listen to different sources of information?

2. What are the common sources of information?

3. What are the different ways in sharing information read or listened to?

4. What values should you practice when sharing information to others?

What I Can Do

Apply what you have learned in this module by doing this activity.

1. Select ONE from the materials below to read or listen to. You can look for it online or listen on the radio/television at home.
    - a news report about a current issue
    - an article from a reliable website
    - a paragraph/short chapter from a textbook
    - a speech
    - a TED-Ed presentation
    - an informative vlog
    - a podcast
    - an interview/panel discussion

2. Listen/read the material you selected. Write the gist and specific details that can be useful to daily living.
   Gist

   Specific details
   _____
   _____

3. Share the information you have gathered to others. Choose ONE from the suggested outputs below.

   A. Share the information thru a short vlog. Tell your viewers details about the material you listened to/read and the usefulness of the information you have gathered from it. Also, don't forget to mention in your vlog how these pieces of information can be used in daily living.

   B. Share the information to your family members/friends thru a short conversation. Highlight/Emphasize how you and your family members can use the information you have heard/read. Record the conversation (video or audio).

   C. Write a short paragraph expressing what you have learned from the material you listened to or read. Do not forget to include in your paragraph how you will use the information/what actions you will do based from the information you have read or listened to.

4. Use the simple rubrics below as guide while working on this activity.

Criteria	Points
The gist (what is it all about) of the listening/reading material is mentioned. Specific details/information from the listening/reading material are included in the output.	10 pts.
How the information can be useful in daily life is mentioned/emphasized.	10 pts.
Output is presentable, creative, and well-prepared.	5 pts.
Output has little error in grammar and use of the English language.	5 pts.

5. For outputs A and B, send it as an attachment to your teacher's email. For output C, submit it together with the other written outputs for this module.

Assessment

Read the following texts. After reading, answer the questions that will follow.

1. Around the world, environmental activists are finding gloves, masks, and empty bottles of hand sanitizer everywhere they shouldn't be. In France, members of the nonprofit Opération Mer Propre (translated, "Operation Clean Sea"), which leads beach clean-up efforts along the Côte d'Azur, have been posting photos and videos of the litter online — masks cluttering up the rocky seafloor, divers wading through used gloves. "Soon we'll run the risk of having more masks than jellyfish in the Mediterranean," one member wrote on social media. Source of Text: Great, now the ocean is filled with COVID trash: Masks, gloves, and hand sanitizer. By Joseph Winters on Jun 11, 2020. https://grist.org/climate/great-now-the-ocean-is-filled-with-covid-trash-masks-gloves-and-hand-sanitizer/

   What is the text all about? (1pt.)
   Answer:
   The text is all about _____.

   What specific information can you get from the text? Write two. (2pts.)
   Answer:
   According to the text, _____. Also, the text tells us that _____.

   What actions can you do or suggest to solve the problem given in the text? (2pts.)
   Answer:

2. Sleep is essential for good health. In fact, we need sleep to survive — just like we need food and water. So, it's no wonder that we spend about one-third of our lives sleeping. Many biological processes happen during sleep. The brain stores new information and gets rid of toxic waste. Nerve cells communicate and reorganize, which supports healthy brain function. The body repairs cells, restores energy, and releases molecules like hormones and proteins. These processes are critical for overall health. Without them, your body can't function correctly. Source of text: What Is the Purpose of Sleep? https://www.healthline.com/health/why-do-we-sleep

   What is the text all about? (1pt.)

Additional Activities

To enrich your learnings from this module, read the short text below and accomplish the activities that will follow.

1. Read the short inspirational text below written by Norman Vincent Peale:

   The world in which you live is not determined by outward circumstances as much as it is by the thoughts that occupy your mind. You can think and believe your way to misery or to a life of joy, satisfaction, and abundance. You have the power to choose.

   The concept of positive thinking is a philosophy, an expression of faith. It doesn't ignore life's problems, but explains a practical approach to deal with, and overcome, them. Anyone interested in seeking a better, promise- filled way of life, can find it through positive thinking and faith in God.

   Consider the old truism that behind the darkest clouds the sun is shining. In the toughest situations there is always some value that is inherently good. The positive thinker will look for the good, for the advantage, and will therefore do far better with the difficulty than the negative thinker will. What you deeply think and visualize has a strong tendency to happen.
   Source of text: 4 Positive Thinking Tips from Norman Vincent Peale. https://www.guideposts.org/better-living/positive-living/emotional-and-mental-health/4-positive-thinking-tips-from-norman

2. Write the gist of the text as well as two specific information or details.
   - Gist

   - Specific information or details

3. Choose ONE from the following creative ways to share what you have learned from the text.
    A. Write a short story and include the lesson(s) you have learned from the text.

    B. Draw a short comics/manga and include the information you have learned from the text in the story.

    C. Compose a poem that expresses the same theme and feelings as the text of Norman Vincent Peale.

    D. Compose and perform a song that expresses the same theme and feelings as the text.

4. For outputs A-C, write/type it and submit it together with the other written outputs for this module. For output D, send the recorded performance to your teacher's email.
